

JENS CLAUSEN, GERMANY

Title: "Reflections Materials: Sterling silver and steel and a memory disk Price € 770,-

It was not so much the image of a certain reliquary, but its function that inspired me.

Being a container to 'display' relics or remains of something having a significance, it can easily be transformed into the present time (as is constantly done), even if it loses the religious significance.

I chose a part of a HardDiskDrive because, besides having faith in 'someone', 'THINGS' are sometimes becoming more important or even substitutes: technological items for example, in this case a computer, whose hard disk helps us to store (personal) important information and memories. ("forever"!?)

In addition to its original function the Disk is mirror-polished, reflecting its surroundings and changing all the time.

Someone may unexpectedly see him/herself or others, causing some kind of reaction.

