Religion- Reflection-Recycling

This work is my commentary on how the Roman Catholic religion is being forced upon people in my country and I want to make the wearer reflect on this.

Objects related to the Roman Catholic cult surround us everywhere: in the street, in our schools, in our media, public institutions and even in Parliament. Catholic symbols are impudently bandied about, invading our shared space. Things which should be discreet and personal are made public and political. Because they are everywhere they are emptied of spiritual meaning. The necklace is made from anonymous, individual stories, prayers and souvenirs sold as scrap metal. Was their destiny determined by a fateful resignation or sad necessity? They were going to be melted down and I decided to “rescue “ them. The wearer can change the look of the necklace by exchanging the attached Catholic religious symbols for the symbols of other religions, or can leave it as it.
