Title: Flying Seed - Where to? Materials: Silver and gold and japanese pearl Price: € 620,-

I believe in destiny. I believe that every turn in life must have a reason.

I have been fascinated by different kinds of seeds, which are able to fly. I view these seeds as individuals, just like people. Each has its own destiny. When a seed is ready to set off, what happens around it may decide how far it will go, where it will land, and if it will succeed in rooting in the soil or if it will just perish. No matter where it ends up, the seed will try its best to grow and hold on.

I created a little seed with three petals as its wings and mounted it on a flower-like ring. It looks as if the flower will open up at any minute, and the seed will be thrown into the air to begin its journey. The ring is made using an anticlastic forming technique.
