

DANIEL MICHEL, FACHHOCHSCHULE DUSSELDORF, GERMANY

Title: Progress+Illusion, Materials: Plexiglass, allu and rubber & Porcelain, kunstharz and metal and printplate, Price € 420,-

The general faith in progress and enlightenment through technology makes us look into the future with a carefree view without seeing its destructive powers.

The broken angel stands for the questionability of this attitude and admonishes us to reflect.

The cross made of a circuit board symbolizes the blind confidence in technology and the faith in becoming a better world through science, development and the radical exploitation of the newest scientific solutions.

For me this jewel made from pieces I found, is very pathetic, perhaps naive and a little "do-gooderlike"; a kind of humour is added that helps to soften serious content.

