A person's faith can't be seen from the outside, but I am sure that this faith is shown by the special way of a person's behaviour and way to live. To show my point of view in jewellery, I used three round plates as a platform and as a symbol of the people. Different objects on the inside represent the individual faith of these people. The objects are hidden by rubber, but one can imagine their clear shapes because of the elasticity of the material.

These objects are hidden by rubber, but one can realize its clear shapes caused by the elasticity of the material. The reason for me to use these effects and materials was, to show the evolution of how the way to believe becomes the way to act. There are people whose faith strengthens them so much that they are able to send out signals with it. They don't try to keep their faith to themselves, but let it come to life by their actions. I call this "faith which is alive".
